LAWYER HALLAN ON TRIAL

Charged in Sixteen Indictments with Theft, Forgery and Fraud.

Joseph D. Hallan, a lawyer, was on trial to day before Judge Fitzgerald in the Court of General Sessions, charged in sixteen different indictments with grand larceny, forgery and conspiracy.

Mr. Hallan was attorney for the United States Commercial Agency and Collection

Dr. J. B. Manch, of 242 West Thirty-eighth street, who was summoned in the woman's last hours, did not notify the police at all, notwithstanding he was the last physician to be called. A partially empticed bottle of a colorless fluid was found in it is. Nichols's room, and it was from that the puncent odor of einer emanated. Only a portion of a lakel was found on the bottle, and on it were printed a skull and crossbones in red ink.

Mrs. Dale remembered that a messenger-boy was summoned by Mrs. Nichols Monday atternoon, and she recollected that Mrs. Nichols said to him to "get it at Forty-second street." When the boy returned, however, Mrs. Dale heard a lot more. She heard the lad remark: "I couldn't get this before I signed my name."

"I'll scratch the label off and nobody can'tell where you got it."

That was the last Mrs. Dale saw or heard of Mrs. Nichols alive.

It was discovered by the police to-day that Minnie sent District Messenger boy 1.763 to the drug store of W. W. Maddeck, 1452 Broadway, Monday afternoon, with a prescription purporting to have been written by Dr. Stewart, of 221 West Forty-second street. It called for an ounce of laudanum, and Druggist Maddock filled the order.

The prescription is not in regular medical form, and it is thought that Mrs. Nichols wrote it herself, as there are no physician's terms or marks on the paper. Besides, it was written on an ordinary sheet of note paper.
